SOUDERTON MASTER BATH TRANSFORMED FOR FORM & FUNCTION

Master bathrooms should be a retreat from the stress of the day—not the cause of it. Yet for these homeowners in Souderton, that was unfortunately the case. When they approached us about the project, we learned that their master bathroom was a constant source of frustration.

From a storage perspective, they lacked places to stow items around the vanity and what storage was available was inconveniently placed. As for the layout, their shower was cramped, and their toilet area lacked privacy. In terms of functionality, the room wasn't properly ventilated. As a result, following every shower the room became so steamy that the couple was forced to use a hallway bathroom to complete their preparations for work every day.

What this couple wanted was a stylish bathroom retreat where they could happily begin and conclude each day in comfort. With these goals in mind, our team set out to design and build a master bathroom with the form and function to fulfill their wishes.

The Custom Craft Difference

Souderton Master Bath Transformed for Form & Function

One of the keys to this renovation was getting rid of a space-hogging soaking tub that was seldom used. This provided us with the few extra square feet necessary to create a much larger shower enclosure, as well as an adjacent bench with hooks for towels and storage both above and below.

Our clients gravitated toward warm neutrals, so we painted the walls a calming Sherwin Williams Pavilion Beige. Note how beautifully the Aria quartz countertop and the Florentine Carrara field tile complement the beige wall color. The Conch Sea Jewel accent tile design in the shower lends additional visual interest to the space.

Across from the shower, we built a knee wall for the toilet area to create a more secluded feel, and incorporated built-in shelves for the toilet paper. On the other side of the half wall, we installed a gorgeous double-vanity with ample storage beneath, as well as a vertical cabinet above placed between the two mirrors.

To remedy their moisture problems, we installed a Fantech PB190 exhaust to quietly and efficiently control the humidity in the space.

The end result was a spa-like bathroom retreat that our clients adore. Here's what they had to share about the experience: "The process is organized and thorough. They provide quality workmanship. All the employees are very nice and enjoyable to work with. We love our master bath!"

In a recent email newsletter, our designers challenged our clients, team members, and friends to test their kitchen design skills in the "Bring this Kitchen to Life" coloring contest. We are pleased to announce the winners of the contest: Megan and Ben! Many thanks to everyone who submitted an entry. We hope you found the kitchen design process an enjoyable exercise.
